

In Honor of the Memory of Edward Creighton, 1820-1874

Builder of the western half of the overland lines of the Western Union Telegraph Company, now celebrating its one hundredth anniversary.

Founder of The Creighton University, recognized as one of the Midwest's great institutions of learning, and Alma Mater of some of the nation's outstanding citizens.

First President of the First National Bank of Omaha.

When Edward Creighton took over the presidency of the "Oldest National Bank from Omaha West," he brought to it his extraordinary foresight and business capabilities. The financial stability which the First National enjoys today, and the wide range of financial services it provides for First National customers are due, in great part, to the banking structure Edward Creighton created in 1863. It is his spirit of progress that helps the First National Bank of Omaha bring you up-to-the-minute banking.
